

WORKING IN PARTNERSHIP

Integrate Sustainability recognises and values the traditional Aboriginal knowledge in conservation and land management across Australia. Our team partner with Traditional Owners and Aboriginal groups to combine traditional and western sciences to protect the environment and aboriginal peoples interests.

We understand that the needs of every Aboriginal community and group differ. Therefore, we will work with you to tailor services to achieve a positive outcome that addresses the interests of your community. We are also able to provide in-house expertise and professionals for on-ground coverage, support and project implementation.

We offer a range of services to Aboriginal Groups on a diverse range of topics, including:

- Help communities to understand the WA and Commonwealth Environmental Approval process.
- Conduct independent peer reviews for major projects and provide guidance on areas for consultation with a focus on Aboriginal priority areas and interests.
- Assist in the development and implementation of land management plans, environmental monitoring plans, conservation and rehabilitation management plans.
- Assist with the development of cultural management strategies and heritage management plans.
- Working with communities on protocols to guide enterprise development.
- Independent meeting facilitation with traditional owners, stakeholders and industry.
- Training and capacity building within communities.
- Assist with the development of on-ground conservation programs and projects.
- Conduct mapping and GIS activities.
- Support administration systems development.
